Occupations in Demand

<https://lmi.idaho.gov/occupations-in-demand>

- Use of the Occupations in Demand requires career planners to select 150 top jobs, select those that don't require Bachelor's or Master's degree and select their region

A couple questions...

Thinking about using the policy, how would you answer?

- If using the top 150 jobs list, do career planners have 150 jobs to choose from?
- If using the top 150 jobs list, do career planners across the state have at least 20 jobs to choose from?

In practice

- Using a Region 2, Lewiston Example
- After selecting “North Central” and removing “Bachelor’s, Master’s and Doctoral”, there are 53 occupations left on the list.
- Taking out advanced degrees reduces the list by 65%

In practice

- The 53 jobs also include those that require “no training” or “HS diploma only”
- Jobs that require no training are not ones that career planners can put participants into training for
- When you remove the no training jobs, career planners are left with 16 jobs that we can train for

In practice

- In Lewiston, participants can only select from 16 occupations
- Out of those 16, 4 have no new jobs open annually or annual openings are “N/A”
- Out of the 12 remaining, 5 have less than 5 opening annually
- Ultimately there are 7 occupations on the list that have more than 5 openings per year in Lewiston

Excluded occupations

- IDOL has supported participants with a degree who want to go through ABCTE to become teachers
- Teachers are excluded because they require a Bachelor's degree
- IDOL has also supported participants finishing up higher level degrees when the occupations were in demand: social workers, medical occupations, etc., these are no longer on the list

In summary

- The Top 150 jobs list has been a unifying starting point
- However, it is not working as it was intended
- Participants have severely limited choice of occupations
- The intent of WIOA is to allow sufficient participant choice
